Kansas City's "NAFTA" Hub

Kansas City and the state of Missouri are preparing to play a lead role in the future development of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Notable accomplishments have already taken place regarding Kansas City's strong relationship with Mexico, including Kansas City's Mexiplex, its continued development of an inland port distribution center, and the proposed establishment of a Mexican Customs Office in Kansas City. Now development efforts are also looking northward and why not? Canada has long been Missouri's top trading partner, with exports to the country exceeding over 25% of Missouri's total exports.

A new door to trade and investment opportunities between Missouri and Manitoba was opened in October with the signing of the Winnipeg-Kansas City agreement in October. A delegation from Winnipeg visited Kansas City in November and now a trade mission from Kansas City will travel to Winnipeg in June 2006 as the two cities develop close ties important to the growth of the I-35 North/South corridor between

Department Completes Internal Reorganization

The Department of Economic Development has completed a major internal reorganization that builds on current strengths and incorporates a private sector approach to doing business. Just four months after announcing the reorganization effort, DED Director Greg Steinhoff announced the creation of the new Business and Community Services Division, which merges the former divisions of Business Development and Trade with Community Development in order to take advantage of the combined expertise of both divisions. Read more...

November Employment Increases in Metros

Payroll employment increased seasonally in most of Missouri's metropolitan areas in November as retail stores ramped up for the holiday season and schools reached peak employment for the fall semester. The St. Louis metropolitan area added the most jobs with 6,400; Kansas City employment increased by 2,000 jobs; Columbia by 700 jobs; Joplin by 300 jobs; Jefferson City by 200 jobs and St. Joseph by 100 jobs. Springfield employment dipped by 100 jobs. Statewide, Missouri payrolls grew by 3,500 jobs in November, bringing to total 28,100 new jobs created since January.

Unemployment increased in all areas of the state in November, paralleling the increase in Missouri's figure of six-tenths of a point to 5.6 percent. Among metropolitan areas, Kansas City had the highest rate at 5.6 percent while Columbia's 3.5 percent was the lowest rate. St. Joseph experienced the largest increase: 0.9 percentage point with the other metropolitan rates increasing by 0.5 to 0.7 percent.

Toyota Considering U.S. Site for Parts Plant

In a move to ward off renewed trade friction over automobiles between Japan and the U.S., Toyota Motor Corp. is considering building an engine and transmission manufacturing plant in the United States. A potential location may be in Michigan, as that state has been particularly hard hit by job losses and a declining regional economy due to the slumping auto industry there. It is also already home to several other major Japanese auto parts makers. Read more...
